"LITTLE WOMEN" CAST

Little Women

It was with a feeling of apprehension that every senior watched the curtain rise upon "Little Women," the annual offering of the Senior Class. Concern had run high as to the wisdom of the choice of the play, "Little Women." Would amateurs have the ability to give to the masterpiece of Louisa M. Alcott the naturalness of character portrayal, the depth and sincerity of feeling, and the technical perfection, which alone would bring to the performance the high degree of excellence that the play itself deserves?

However, with the first words of the immortal Jo as they came from the lips of Miss Janet A. Neill, there was instilled in the worried hearts of the seniors the comforting realization that the play would in no measure fall below the standard set by the many preceding classes. And with the unfolding of the subsequent action, our acquaintance with the pleasantly familiar characters of the well-known story were renewed.

Meg was brought to life with all her sweet charm by the able characterization of Miss Louise de Montigny, while Russell Stone made a human and likeable person of John Brooke.

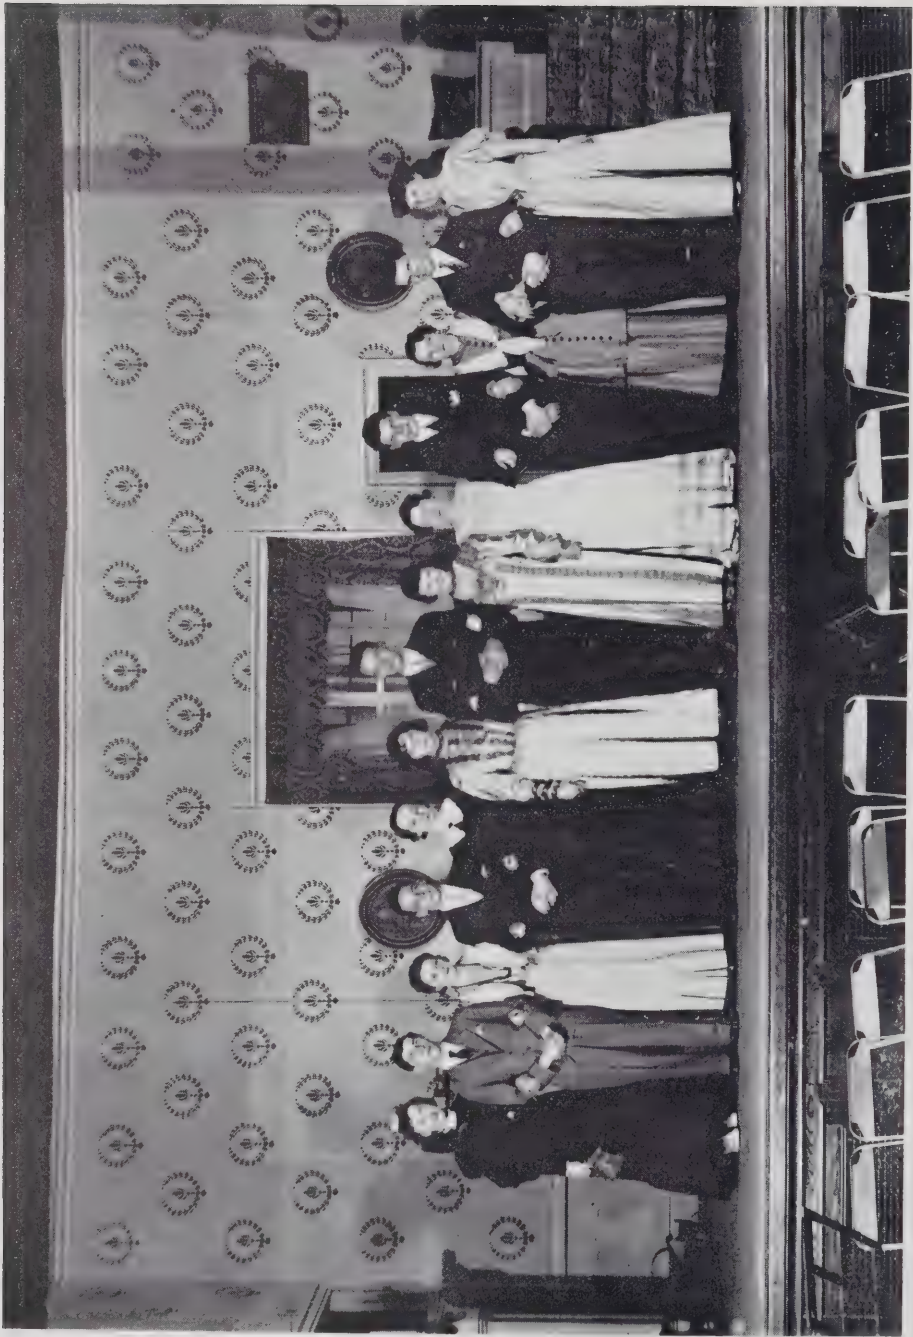

The affected attitude of Amy was presented so convincingly that one would be hard put to recognize the delightful Miss Louise Scrammage. Apparently, Paul Petersen's boyish Laurie was able to see through her veneer. Laurie was as generous as he was lovable.

The frail Beth was played by dainty Miss Jane Murray, who not only looked but lived her part.

The parents of the girls, Mr. and Mrs. March, were Miss Virginia Miers and Alburn Perry. Although Miss Miers was not the "Marmee" that was expected, nevertheless her interpretation was original and appealing. Mr. March was the genial philosopher who made such a fine foil for Professor Bhaer, played by George Cushman, who gave one of the best performances of the evening.

Character roles, lending atmosphere, were supplied by Evelyn Telfer who frolicked through the part of Aunt March with a freshness and vigor that was extraordinary; by Robert McNulty who immortalized Colonel Lawrence as a gruff and sincere gentleman; by Helen Michelson who amusingly took the part of Hannah.

The entire performance did the Senior Class credit. In future years as we delve through the mementoes and souvenirs of our High School days, the program for "Little Women" will strike a beautiful and resplendent chime in our hearts and memories.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENES

ACT I—Sitting room of the March home in Concord, Mass., December, 1863.

"It was a comfortable old place, though the carpet was faded and the furniture very plain, for a good picture or two hung on the walls, books filled the recesses, chrysanthemums and Christmas roses blossomed in the windows, and a pleasant atmosphere of home peace pervaded it."

ACT II—Scene I—The same, three months later. Morning, March, 1864.

Scene II—The same, six months later. Late afternoon, September, 1864.

(The curtain was lowered for a few moments to denote a lapse of time.)

ACT III—The same, two and one-half years later. Afternoon.

ACT IV—The same, eighteen months later. Afternoon, October, 1868.

SENIOR PLAY STAGE CREW

Class Poem

INSPIRATION

I watch—in fancy—one hundred years ago,
Our school's first class through modest portals go;
Though numbers few, not one the future fears—
His heritage from Pilgrim pioneers.
While long I muse on Progress since that day,
A voice down through the ages seems to say:

“O Youth, Experience speaks! With outstretched hand
To clasp your own, across Time's span I stand;
Your splendid hosts, so shining bright,
Who deeds to prove their power crave,
Do thrill again my heart still young and brave!

“Life is a mighty temple, towering high;
Its walls, slow-rising through the years gone by,
Its half-built spires that seek the sky,
Your hands—strong, trained—must higher raise,
That you may do your share with well-earned praise.

“Your task, unfinished, is with dangers fraught—
Perfection is by patient labour wrought—
If perfect now, no glory thine
To claim with pride when life is through,
‘Behold! my fondest dream at last come true!’

“Imperfect? Yes. But wonderfully so!
When chords of golden music, sweeping low,
Are muted, sudden silence falls!
Its questioning notes are laid to rest
Within the heart that knows the answers best.

“A bitter, empty mem'ry—mine and thine—
Save for the precious thought we hold entwined
Forever about our lives and deaths:
Of passing on Truth's flaming Torch
To gallant, trusty youths who guard and watch.

“Nay, falter not, nor shrink from Duty's call;
The works of Art are fashioned not by all;
To you a humble part may fall.
Remember: Nature's perfect plan
Conceals the mystery of the soul of Man!

“Since this is so, to your own task be true;
Make it the aim of your Ideals—afew;
Enshrine it, and with love divine,
While running sands still leave you time,
Offer your Gift—perfected—to Mankind!”

RUTH EMILY MCGOWAN.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL FACULTY

1935

Vocational School

It is the aim of the Vocational School to fit boys for useful employment through the development of the occupational skill required for the performance of satisfactory work under actual employment conditions in the following trades: automobile, cabinet making, electricity, machine shop, painting and decorating, printing, and sheet metal.

One half of the time is devoted to actual shop work and the other half to related and academic work. The laboratory method of instruction which is used in the related classes is very closely correlated with the shop work. This close tie-up assures a thorough training in shop and technical information.

The school attempts to prepare the boy morally, intellectually, and physically for the vocation for which he seems to be best fitted by nature, ability, and opportunity; at the completion of his course the school places the student in the industry trained for, keeps in touch with his progress, and encourages his promotion.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL COUNCIL

Class History

We are the class of nineteen-thirty-five.

We tell the story of three gay, good years. Three years, full and fragrant. Three years.

"Like angels' visits, short and bright."

We are the spirit and the flesh of the class of nineteen-thirty-five, and this is our story.

We came to Medford High School branded with individual stigmata for we are the Centennial Class.

The lore and tradition of one hundred years had so piled up that we had not only a tremendous record to maintain, but also a super-human undertaking in order that we might leave behind us a memory, sparkling with accomplishment. We fortified ourselves by building as strong an organization as possible. Out of chaos, we constructed an organized institution, for we were the first sophomore class to elect leaders. Frank Daly, Nan Preston, Agnes Boudreau, and Lawrence Rockwood were the firm foundation on which we based this huge undertaking which was to make us as nearly perfect as possible. We went a step further. We appointed six persons, called a student council, the basis of the more perfect plan that was later to become the student government.

We embellished our progress, using every ounce of talent which we could find in our group. We were the first class to seize from our sophomore members the best dramatic talent which could be found in order to produce a play. "Speaking to Father," the comedy written by George Ade, was the perfect foil for the perfect entertainment.

We strengthened our organization by perfecting the bodies of the individuals who were to make us supreme. The boys and girls who made up our class played hard and played to win. Even in our infancy, we, the class of nineteen-thirty-five, were so successful in these contests that no record of one hundred years of unceasing toil has been so bright. As the honors increased, we realized that our extraordinary zeal was being rewarded so graciously that we found it necessary to build an addition to our palace in which to house the spoils of war. We equipped a trophy room that we and those who came after us might leave forever positive evidence of the accomplishments of those who are the life and bloodstream of American youth. Proudly, therein, we set up the prizes and booty of the many contests in which we had been the conqueror. But not all is smooth sailing for a struggling high school class. Piratical fire-commissioners, by condemning our museum, dashed our pride to the ground. No longer could we escort wide-eyed guests to the Trophy Room, and say, "Here is the medal of our championship football team. There is the plaque of our golden-tongued debaters."

Although our athletic efforts were performed with the utmost zeal, the spirit of contest was never subordinated to the fine, fresh affection and brotherhood that was so prominent among us all.

And so we lived two years of laughter, pride, play, labor, achievement. Something there is that is significant in the fact that we are the one-hundredth class of Medford High School. Something there is that makes us feel that we are richer in love and memories than any of those that have come before us.

We have, to guide us, instructors whose zeal and ability and love have been so great as to be an unceasing source of wonderment to us. Four of them we have lost and, in memoriam, we salute them. Yet they have come, one after another, to give us food and nourishment to carry on our development.

Once in each of the two years that began our career, we donned our evening gowns and dinner coats and gave way to uncontrolled joy and pleasure in the two dances that were the special events of each season. The Sophomore Hop and the Junior Prom, carnivals of music and dancing and gay chatter, were among the brightest spots we shall ever have to remember. Socially, they were successful, brilliant parties. As a means of strengthening the bonds of friendship and comradeship, already unimaginably strong, they completed just the task they set out to perfect and they joined our group of undergraduates through revelry and entertainment in such a way that, even now, the fact that we are graduates makes it an impossibility for our band ever to forget that they are an organized, unified institution.

Then we found ourselves growing older. Our responsibilities grew and with the advent of our second term, we conscripted four new leaders and gave to Harry Stabile, Eleanor Keen, Rita DeCroteau, and Joseph Consolmagno the fasces of power. We grew in health and in ability, singing ever "Hit the Line for Medford High" or "Medford Will Shine To-night," working to bring honors to our school and to ourselves, working to keep bright the colors of our banner that was first designed one hundred years ago.

Seven hundred strong, the largest class, we swung along with carefree smiles to hide the fact that we felt that our undertaking was one of the most stupendous we would ever meet. Gradually we grew in dignity; we grew in repose and poise; most of all, however, we grew in love for the institution of which we are the Centennial Part.

As we began our last year in Medford High School, more serious thoughts entered our hitherto carefree minds. Always, up to this time, ours had been a sense of security, for we felt as sophomores and juniors that we still had time in which to make good. But now, as we entered this, our senior year, most of us realized that the future was to bring only uncertainty unless we made the most of our opportunities this last year.

Things that had been commonplace became wonders to tuck away in our memories for the future. Teachers, classmates, and rooms became dearer to us than ever before. The fact that the old library had been reorganized and dedicated to Richard Donnelly Crockwell, a former graduate, was a truth to cherish and remember forever.

Deciding to make this last year an outstanding one in our lives, we joined the several clubs which had been formed by our headmaster, Mr. Kendall. These clubs became the means of forming new friendships and renewing old. Not the least of these organizations was the Senior Advisory Committee to which we elected our class officers: Fred Breed, president; Genevieve Morash, vice-president; Janet Neill, secretary; and Don Morrison, treasurer.

SCENES IN THE SCHOOL

We gathered lasting memories during the football season in which many of our members gained temporary fame. Struggling warriors on the gridiron, most of them our classmates, held aloft the banner of Medford High School by defeating not a few unbeaten teams, gaining a reputation as the most formidable schoolboy opponent in the state. Even the band, attired in neat blue and white uniforms, thrilled us with its stirring music.

Our boys made famous the remaining athletic teams: soccer, basketball, hockey, track, and baseball, as the seasons demanded; our girls eagerly entered swimming, soccer, basketball, and tennis. Each of these games was instrumental in molding true sportsmanship, a characteristic necessary to all in future life.

Succeeding the student council of other years, a new type of student government came into being. The new school legislature was made up of two branches: the Cabinet, consisting of all the club presidents and senior class officers; and the House of Delegates, composed of representatives chosen by each home room. The purpose of this form of government was gradually to make the students more aware of their responsibilities in school life.

Entering everything with a zeal that proved our earnestness, we again displayed our dramatic talent in the two unforgettable plays of the year. Presented by the Dramatic Club under the direction of Mr. Carey, "Little Women," Louisa May Alcott's immortal novel, came to life on the stage. "Theatres des Reflets Etranges," a series of sketches spoken in French, was given before an appreciative audience. Miss Loftus, organizer of the new French Dramatic Club, not only directed the actors in this play, but also wrote the sketches adapted from the book, "Reflets Etranges."

Storing away in our minds recollections of these dramatic events, we turned to what the Seniors usually regard as the one bright social affair of the year, the Senior Prom, in which we surpassed all expectations by producing the most colorful dance in our three years of festival creations.

We were not alone in providing stirring occasions for our souvenirs. There were three outstanding school assemblies memorable for their variety and entertainment: George Elias, the man who, until he became a citizen of the United States, was without a country; Mrs. Anton Lang, the famed singer from Oberammergau, who was introduced by Mr. John Ward, lecturer on the Passion Play; and Mischa Tulin with his mysterious electrical instrument of music, the theremin.

More important than any of our other social events has been the Centennial Celebration just preceding our graduation. Although we are the one-hundredth class of Medford High School by coincidence, we take great pride in being so honored.

Now, as we draw our class history to an end, may we close with a sincere vote of thanks and appreciation for the many opportunities which have been extended to us by the citizens of Medford.

NAN L. PRESTON,

ALBERT M. PEARSON.

STUDENT COUNCIL CABINET

Cabinet

OFFICERS:

President ROBERT GURNEY
 Secretary CHARLOTTE ARNE

The Cabinet, which is the upper house of the Student Council, was organized this year and conducted efficiently under the guidance of Miss Roughsedge. This group is composed of the presidents of all school clubs and the officers of the Senior Class. For 1935 only, four extra representatives, who made special investigations of other student governments, were included in its membership. The function of the Cabinet is to receive from the House of Delegates all the propositions passed by the House. These propositions are then discussed in the Cabinet which decides whether or not they shall be sent to the Headmaster for his consideration. In this way, a contact is established between the students, who are all represented in the House of Delegates, and the Headmaster. One of the important duties assumed by the Cabinet was the management of the Centenary Exhibition held at the High School, May 16, 17, and 18.

House of Delegates

OFFICERS:

President ALBERT PEARSON
 Vice-President JOAN SPENCER
 Secretary ROY CARPENTER

ADVISERS:

BURTON W. IRISH MISS ELIZABETH T. FLANAGAN
 MISS PAULINE WEBBER

The House of Delegates, the lower branch of the Student Council, is composed of one representative from each home room who is elected by popular vote. The Student Council has been organized so that each pupil in the school may feel himself part of an organization that promotes the general welfare of the school.

The delegate may receive suggestions from the students of his home room. A business meeting is then conducted to discuss the suggestions made. If the room votes to send the idea to the House, it is presented at the business meeting and is voted on; then the report, in writing, is sent to the Cabinet. If the report is passed in the Cabinet, it is then presented to Mr. Kendall in formal manner. Every bill, which in turn has been suggested by the home room, must originate in the House. Hence, every pupil is a part of the Student Council. The meetings of the House of Delegates are held every first and third Friday in Room 44.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES

Class Day Oration

LIFE -- A GIFT

What is life? The poets have called it a bubble, a jest, a cheat, a galling load, a ladder, a perilous journey, a romance, a flame, a call to battle, the stuff on which "to try the soul's strength."

What is life to you, my classmates? Perhaps it is like some mechanical toy, shiny and mysterious. Maybe it is a game, in which you have learned that one plays best who abides by the rules, cooperates with his team-mates, and thrills to the excitement of the sport. You may consider it a journey, a trip of adventurous exploration on which one meets new faces, sees new places, and encounters new dangers. Be it a toy, a game, or a journey, to all of us life is a gift. This gift is not ours to destroy nor cast aside. It is for us to use wisely. How then shall we make the most of it and put it to its best use?

What is our objective in life? Is it simply the making of money? Charles M. Schwab holds that the real leaders of industry and the real men in life are not always those who have acquired wealth. In addressing the students at Princeton University a few years ago, he said, "Money is often a matter of chance or good fortune, and is not the mark of a successful life."

Our primary purpose should be to strive for that which is worthy of American manhood and womanhood. When one can look back on his life to see his work successfully accomplished and meriting the commendation of his fellow-men, then and then only is that man a success.

What has life taught us so far? In the classroom it has shown us the value of honesty. We have all admired the youth who, having a chance to cheat, played squarely. On the athletic field, in giving up personal glory for the good of the team, we have learned the value of cooperation.

In the world about us we have met our greatest test. Life has taken on the character of a mountain lake lashed with diabolic fury by the god of wind. The industrial depression has been, for most of us, our first great crisis. For many it has meant giving up the thought of all further educational training, for others it has necessitated leaving school to help in the support of their families, and for each one of us it has meant surrendering things that we have been accustomed to accept as commonplace. In all great crises men are made or broken. In this one, youth has been taught the lesson of sacrifice and has responded courageously.

Thus fortified, how shall we proceed to put to its best use this gift of life? We desire to build, to create, to serve, but the way is not immediately clear. The manual laborer, fortunate fellow that he is, builds a great building of steel and cement. He digs a foundation, erects a steel super-structure fastened with rivets, and then pours his cement. He can see progress from day to day. He is fashioning a building that rises like a great silver needle up into the clouds. In due time the task is finished. He has created something that will stand long after he is but a part of the earth's dust. Unlike the builder in steel and cement, we may find ourselves laboring in a field of uncertainty. We aspire to construct an even higher building, but our plan seems merely visionary. Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, the younger daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne, is a glorious example of one who could not see the way clearly, but was willing to take the risk. Her objective was to help the destitute poor who were suffering from incurable cancer. In 1894 in the Lower East Side of New York, she rented a small flat into which she took to live with her, several cancer patients. This was the beginning of a work that occupied her until her death in 1926, at the age of seventy-five. "To the voices of discouragement, derision, and indignation," she wrote, "I had a strong answer—that I knew I was incapable of doing much, but that I was going to carry out my idea . . . in so far as I could . . . I did anything I could to prove to them (the very poor) that I did not merely greet them in passing, but knew their claim to live with her, with the rest of mankind to be absolute truth." Woefully inadequate quarters, mortgages and debts on new construction, and grave personal illness were part of her lot. Despite these obstacles, this saintly woman, after thirty-two years of labor, succeeded in establishing two institutions for the cancerous poor of New York City.

So life for us may be a gamble, but it is worth the struggle.

Life's battle, however, cannot be won without having the fighting machine in perfect working order. We are apt to lose sight of the blessing of physical health until the day when ours becomes impaired. You can all remember getting a speck of dirt in your eye. It was painful; your eye swelled and became inflamed. You said to yourself, "I'd give almost anything to get rid of that speck." Yet how often, on the other hand, have you reflected, "I am in good health; I am indeed fortunate?"

To do a thing well, one must love and have confidence in the undertaking. We must have more faith than did the little boy who had been put to bed during a violent thunderstorm: the poor little chap was scared half to death, but his mother told him that he need not be afraid; that God was with him and would take care of him. "Yes, I know," replied the little fellow, "but why can't I go downstairs with Dad, and you stay up here with God?"

Yes, my classmates, we need to love our work!

Let us not forget, however, that the day's business is subservient to spiritual progress. Let us not be like the individual who never fails to perform his daily dozen, but who neglects to beautify his soul. There was once a man who had been bedridden for the last ten years of his life, crippled with pain. Towards the end, he even became blind. Yet he did not curse either man or life, but remained kind and cheerful to the end. What was this man's secret? Simply that he accepted his suffering and used it as a means of enriching his spiritual life.

How can we enrich our lives? Why not steer clear of self-centered living and seek divine sympathy and love in one another? In the Centenary Celebration of Medford High School last month, perhaps the most impressive note was the fine sense of loyalty, the community of spirit, the deep faith, that pervaded the whole gathering.

Dispersion will never loosen that bond knit by our Alma Mater. My classmates, we are the last link in that span of a century. May we not also be the first link in the century to come? If we cherish these spiritual values, we shall be using the gift of life wisely.

By recognition, then, of the blessing of good health, by our willingness to risk uncertainties, by loving the work we undertake to do, and by seeking, above all, to satisfy spiritual needs,— thus shall we be wise in the use of life.

Lest we underrate its value, recall these words of Calvin Coolidge: "No man is meanly born. About his cradle is the wondrous miracle of life. He may descend into the depths, he may live in infamy and perish miserably, but he is born great."

It is for us to keep up the greatness.

We have assumed the obligations of the gift of life. By giving the best that is in us, we can worthily render thanks to God.

And now, my classmates, as we set forth along the road, let me, in the words of the poet Countee Cullen, leave with you this parting message:

"In days I hope will come,
Ere youth has sped and strength of mind,
Ere voices sweet grow dumb,
I have a rendezvous with life
When Spring's first heralds hum.
Sure some would cry it better far
To crown their days in sleep
Than face the wind, the road, and rain,
To heed the falling deep.
Though wet nor blow nor space I fear,
Yet fear I deeply too
Lest death shall greet and claim me ere
I keep life's rendezvous."

"REVIEW" STAFF

1935

M. H. S. Review

Operating under an entirely new system, featuring modern methods of school magazine make-up and content, the "M. H. S. Review" has enjoyed its most successful season in years. The staff, which was in part responsible for reviving our school magazine after a period of dormancy, has co-operated to the fullest extent with the editorial board and advisers, resulting in such a splendid product.

The Christmas Number, issued late in December, was received with enthusiasm throughout the school and community, due in no small part to the attractive appearance and varied contents.

The climax of the season was reached upon the publication of the Centenary Number during the celebration in May. Five months of hard work by editors and advisers was efficiently displayed. The attractiveness of the pages was enhanced by numerous cuts and a wider variety of typography. One-third of the contents was devoted to the Centenary, requiring intensive research work. The remaining material was effectively balanced, assuring complete coverage of all school affairs and furnished an excellent opportunity to display the literary, poetic, or artistic talents of the staff members.

Since the staff was organized on a basis of giving each student credit for what he had written, rather than having a definite roster, all students in the school were eligible to compete. All who had contributed material were considered members of the staff and were given individual credit for their efforts.

The "Review" was honored this season with a charter membership in the New England Interscholastic Press Association.

PRIZE SPEAKING CONTESTANTS

Prize Speaking Contest

Much difficulty was experienced by the judges in the selection of winners in the Seventh Annual Prize Speaking Contest, held in the Assembly Hall, May 23. After lengthy deliberations, the gold medals were awarded to two honor pupils, Barbara G. Kendall, Class Essayist, and Joseph E. Consolmagno, Ivy Orator. Second prizes, silver medals, were won by Mary G. Plakias and Herbert C. Giffen.

Judges were Professor Albert H. Imlah of Tufts College; Miss Ethel V. Bailey of Emerson College; and Raymond H. Lane of the Henry N. Clark Company.

Headmaster Ralph L. Kendall, as chairman, introduced the speakers.

FRENCH DRAMATIC CLUB

1935

French Dramatic Club

A unique and successful dramatic organization, composed of senior students of French has been founded by Miss Loftus, Head of the Department of Romance Languages. Under her direction the players, "Le Theatre des Reflets Etranges," gave their first performance at the Harvard Graduate School Conference of Teachers of French. The pupils presented excerpts from the works of classical French authors studied in the Senior classes.

The cast of the company included Winthrop Polsey, Kenneth Hirons, Daniel Puffer, George Cushman, Paul Petersen, Robert McNulty, Corinne Roberts, Edith Strickland, Virginia Miers, Helen Elliot, and Dorothy Donabedian. Carleton Lund was business manager. Incidental music was composed by Carl J. Antonellis, a graduate of Medford High. Their work comprised "Je ne Sais Rien de Plus," adapted from the tale, "Apparition" by Guy de Maupassant; "La Chanson du Vent Qui Vente," by Anatole Le Braz; "Extase," by Victor Hugo; and a comedy, "Dans un Bureau Telegraphique," by Lady Bell. Other performances were given in Chelsea, Connecticut, and New Hampshire.

Costumes were under the direction of Miss Katherine L. Baker, Head of the Household Arts Department. Scenery, constructed by students of the Vocational School, was painted under the direction of Miss G. Eleanor Shaw, Head of the Art Department. Scenic artists, who painted the scenery and who had charge of the shifts, were Barbara Comstock, Ruth McGowan, Jean Shufelt, and Louise Antonellis.

The principal aim of this dramatic society is to add a new pleasure to, and excite a genuine interest in, the speaking of the French language.

German Club

OFFICERS:

President MARTIN BOERMEESTER
 Vice-President JAMES ASADOORIAN
 Secretary CATHERINE GRAINGER

The German Club was formed at the beginning of the year by students of German, under Mr. Osgood's direction. This club has joined the Boston League of German Clubs. The aim of the club is a social one, primarily, to foster the German spirit of social pleasures. At the monthly meetings there have been such noteworthy speakers and lecturers as Mr. Ward, with his pictures of Oberammergau; Mr. Flynn, and Mr. Chase, a world traveler.

SCENES FROM FRENCH PLAY

Ivy Oration

We stand before this ivy-clad building, in accordance with a time-honored custom of graduating classes, to add to the venerable walls of Medford High School the token of our loyalty.

The roots of this ivy symbolize our past three years with the varied experiences they have offered us,—the friendships, the rivalries, the pleasures, and the ambitions. The young vines of this plant, beginning their long climb upward, symbolize our future with all that it may have in store for us,—struggles and hopes, obstacles and attainments, doubts and aspirations.

Strange as it may seem, it is from the outside walls of the building that we are to learn our final lesson! I ask you to look at the ivies planted by our predecessors in order to notice the way in which they have grown to the top of the building. You will see that not one of the vines has shot its leafage high in a solitary shaft, but that all have made their upward climb in spreading directions. By the very nature of its growth the ivy thus symbolizes true progress. It begins life a small, restricted plant, clinging to the foundations of some established edifice. As it clambers the lofty walls, reaching out for every crack, grasping every crevice, it spreads its leafy branches widely, but ever toward a higher goal. Although we gaze admiringly upon the beauty of its foliage far above us, we know that the source of its triumphant spread is in the steadfast home-ground.

To-day we start a new life, as does the ivy that we have planted, clinging to the foundations of knowledge that here we have received. As we leave Medford High School, most of us have, or soon will have, a certain goal which we want to attain, and, humble though it may be, a certain ambition. To-day we too, on the ground, look up at the pinnacle to which we wish to climb.

What does the ivy teach us?

Perhaps we have overlooked one of its most significant lessons, for we have long been persuaded that a straight line is the shortest distance between two given points. Geometry has taught us this; we have found it wise to keep faith with the mathematics department. However, in the fullness and beauty of life, this geometrical proposition may be misleading. Many of us have had the delightful experience of discovering that the longest way round is the shortest way home!

Seriously, my classmates, consider what a stiff, unattractive, unpopular plant the ivy would be, if it grew from the ground upward in one straight line! What narrow, unsocial, limited characters we should develop if we confined our lives to the one particular field of our choice.

This machine age, this period of shorter hours, has given to the man who earns his living a great amount of leisure time. To the unambitious, to those satisfied to remain forever in the same position, this leisure time means loafing time. Perhaps half a loaf is better than none, but we ought to make any necessary loafing constructive and profitable; this can be done only if we are willing to give ourselves a chance to master more than our piece of the world's work, and to know more than one way of enjoying spare time.

Nothing could have taught us more truly the value of diversified interests than has the depression. How unfortunate have been the employees of closed businesses and banks, who were versed only in their one particular line of work! How fortunate, on the other hand, have been those who were able to discover hidden talents at the time when they were most needed!

In the future we shall meet many obstacles, but, if we profit by the lesson of the ivy which grasps every rough spot on the wall, using each hindrance as a means to its end, we shall find ourselves using all our talents, and in consequence, becoming wider in sympathy and more appreciative of values in human experience.

“Then, welcome each rebuff
That turns earth’s smoothness rough,
Each sting that bids nor sit nor stand but go!
Be our joys three parts pain!
Strive, and hold cheap the strain;
Learn, nor account the pang; dare, never grudge the throe!”

With a feeling of regret at leaving this building wherein we have spent so many sheltered and happy hours, let us go forth eagerly to face the responsibilities that we must assume. Behind us, as an emblem of loyalty and devotion to Medford High School, we leave this ivy, the living remembrance of the class of 1935.

JOSEPH EDWIN CONSOLMAGNO.

Helen F. Lyons

WORDS are inadequate to express our appreciation of the untiring zeal and devoted assistance rendered by Miss Lyons to make our issue of "The Blue and White" a success.

CENTENNIAL PAGEANT

A Century's Passing

We of the class of nineteen hundred and thirty-five have been honored in many ways during our years in high school. We were the first class to have Sophomore officers, and the originators of several clubs; but the really great thing is that we were the one hundredth class to enter Medford High School.

To us also came the honor of participating in a pageant produced at the Riverside Theatre, Friday, May seventeenth. This pageant portrayed the advancement of the school from the first graduating class of six to the present one of approximately six hundred and fifty.

There were eleven scenes, each representing a different period in the history of the school. Stereopticon slides, lent by the Medford Historical Society, introduced the earlier episodes. Picturing scenes of old Medford, the historical significance of the slides was described in detail by the announcer, George L. Cushman, who spoke from a rostrum at stage left.

The finale, the building of the Medford Seal, was well done. As the significance of the parts of the seal was explained, each section was mounted until the completed design was displayed. The chain of graduates, exhibiting the costumes from 1835 to the present, filed across the stage to form a solid mass as Class President Frederic B. Breed stepped forward for the final address. Singing of the song, especially written for the Centennial by Mrs. Bessie Sage Neill, M. H. S. class of 1904, was the hit of the evening.

This pageant, written by Mrs. Ruth Dame Coolidge, M. H. S. 1898, and under Mr. Leslie R. Carey's direction, played to a capacity audience.

Everyone present thoroughly enjoyed the production, but not more than those participating; the backstage excitement and the thrill of being photographed for the newspapers are events that will never be forgotten by this Centennial Class.

MARSHALS AND USHERS

Class Day

It is an old custom for the Junior class to offer its outstanding material as marshals and ushers to the graduating class. From each home room two girls and a boy are elected to fulfill the honor on Class Day.

It was a lovely sight! Girls, in vari-colored organdy frocks, boys, in white flannels and dark jackets. In preference to crooks, the girls carried garlands of roses and formed arches under which the senior class passed. The exercises were held in the Assembly Hall and from there the entire class went to the front lawn. The marshals and ushers stood in formation making a striking background for the ivy orator, who delivered his oration from the broad front steps of the school to his fellow classmates assembled before him.

The oration ended, the Seniors gave several lusty cheers and Class Day was brought to a close.

Perhaps it was anticipation of their own graduation, perhaps it was merely youth that made the representation of our class so energetic, so upright. Yet, at the closing exercises of the Senior Class of 1934 'twas said of the marshals and ushers,

"What a splendid group to carry the banner for 1935!"

Class Gift

With the realization in mind that the school was badly in need of a Massachusetts State Flag, the Class Gift Committee decided to present one.

On one side of this flag is the coat-of-arms of the Commonwealth with the figure of an Indian reminding the Massachusetts Bay Company of the object of the settlement, as expressed in the charter, the elevation of the Indian and his conversion to Christianity. In his right hand is the bow, and in his left hand one arrow, point downward, symbolizing peace. The reverse side of the colors shows on the same shield, not an Indian, but the historic pine tree of New England. The pine tree is representative of the ship building industry, then one of the most important in New England.

The presentation was made on Class Day by John S. Quinn, Chairman of the Class Gift Committee, to Headmaster Ralph L. Kendall, who accepted the gift for the school. Other members of the committee, who assisted in the presentation, were Miss Marjorie L. Lamont, Albert F. Pearson, and Class President Frederic B. Breed.

SENIOR PROM

Senior Prom

Some of us like to remember the Senior Class as dignified upper classmen who are examples to the remainder of the student body. Most of us prefer to think of those who are leaving this June as the group of charmingly-gowned, laughing girls and well-groomed, happy boys who met at the Armory on Friday evening, January 18, to dance at the gayest of all parties, the Senior Prom.

It was a pleasure to greet in the receiving line Dr. and Mrs. J. Stevens Kadesch, Headmaster and Mrs. Ralph L. Kendall, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Burton W. Irish, Miss Katherine L. Baker, Miss Elizabeth M. Loftus, Mr. Richard J. Phelan, Miss Roberta Brackett, and President Frederic Breed.

The Prom Committee deserves the utmost in compliments, for it provided for us a fine orchestra, novel favors, and a shower of multi-colored balloons.

Senior Reception

The Senior Reception, which closed the social activities of the Class of '35, took place in the Armory, Friday evening, June 7. The hall was decorated with baskets of flowers and pastel streamers. The dance orders were in the school colors, blue and white, and embossed with the Seal of Medford in honor of the Centennial Celebration.

The patrons and patronesses were Dr. and Mrs. J. Stevens Kadesch, Headmaster and Mrs. Ralph L. Kendall, Mr. and Mrs. Bertrand Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie R. Carey, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Harrison, and Miss Katherine L. Baker. They were seated in an attractively lighted garden, adorned with flowers, bubbling fountains, and white picket fence.

DRAMATIC CLUB

Dramatic Club

As sophomores, we discovered that much thesbian ability was to be found amongst us. To the Dramatic Club we took our aspiring ambitions and there found a suitable outlet for them. To-day, as seniors, we look back at the plays we have presented, at the public speaking endeavors we have made, and think inwardly, "A good job, well done!"

Mr. Leslie R. Carey of the English Department has served as coach and adviser to the club, which is governed by Fred Breed, president; Phebe Hayes, vice-president; and Raymond Bosheo, secretary-treasurer.

Each year we have produced at least one play. In the first we enacted "Speaking to Father," in which Philip Marvel, Wallace Mather, Phebe Hayes, Robert Prandin, and Louise Giard were characters.

In our junior year, we participated in two performances. One, "The Silence of God," had for a cast, Raymond Bosheo, Russell Donovan, Philip Marvel, Richard Ashley, and George Cushman. The other, "Secret Service," included Amy Wild, Raymond Bosheo, Helen Elliot, Paul Petersen, Richard Churchill, Virginia Miers, George Cushman, John Carr, Kenneth Hirons, and Russell Donovan.

At Christmas this year we played "Why The Chimes Rang," with Ralph Keene, Philip Marvel, Priscilla Alden, Eleanor Sulis, Thomas Early, Elizabeth Giles, Louise Scrannage, and John A. Goudy in the leads.

Our last performance was "The Bellamy Trial," in which Russell Donovan, John Carr, George Cushman, Esther Smith, Helen Elliot, Franklin Myers, John Quinn, Phebe Hayes, Albert Mayer, Richard D. Churchill, Robert McNulty, Robert Brown, and Sewall Richardson took part.

It has been said that dramatic tendencies show ability, intelligence, and imagination. If this is so, we are the possessors of three very necessary requisites toward success.

IN THE DAYS TO COME:

Will George Cushman continue to be the same fine gentlemanly fellow?

Will Edna Davidson find something to laugh at?

Will "Bob" Gurney speak to a girl?

Will the lunch room be empty?

Will the Seniors know their class songs?

ADVISERS:

MRS. MARY M. BAGLEY	MISS MILDRED C. JUNKINS
MISS M. GERTRUDE ROUGHSEDGE

The numerous activities of the Girls' Club this year have more than justified the formation of such a club in the school. The social work of this organization opened with an impressive induction service at which many new members, both seniors and juniors, were admitted. Soon after this event, the club sponsored the first sophomore assembly of the year, with Mrs. Robert L. Elliot, a former M. H. S. student, speaking on "Six Weeks' Travel in Russia."

At a later meeting the girls entertained the Boys' Club with a pleasant evening of games and dancing.

In conjunction with the Boys' Club, the Girls' Club held an induction on Parents' Night at which Mr. Joseph Thornton of Somerville was the speaker.

At the Christmas meeting the men teachers were special guests with Mr. Brayton officiating as Santa Claus.

During subsequent meetings the club has had Mr. Irish speak on the "History of the Establishment of Schools in this Country;" Mr. Kendall on "Girls;" Mr. Finnegan read one of his own stories; Miss Baker talk on the "History of Domestic Science;" Miss Pratt give a marionette show; and Mr. Rogers speak on the "History of the Jewish People."

The club has helped needy students with doctors' bills as well as contributed some clothing to children in the grades.

The events of the year closed with an induction and installation of officers at the Royall House, Slave Quarters. At this meeting, after Miss Pratt read a story, members of the club entertained with readings.

This second session of the club has been most successful; it is hoped that each year will bring the girls of the school together into a "closer bond of friendship."

The Boys' Club is a representative school group under the able direction of Mr. Phelan and Mr. Finnegan. It is composed of boys who are prominent in the various activities of the school. The club endeavors to assist the faculty in the operation of the school whenever possible. This year it has taken over the supervision of the corridor doors. This organization also sponsored an assembly for the Senior Class.

The Boys' Club joined with the Girls' Club for two enjoyable social evenings. An induction night, to which the parents were invited, was also held jointly by these clubs. The programs of the regular meetings have included speakers, entertainers, and athletic games. An annual outing, held this year at Nahant, closed the activities for the year.

WE WONDER WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IF:

There were no laughs in Mr. Irish's classes.
 Miss Small went to class without her transatlantic trunk.
 The "door stops" couldn't leave class a minute early.
 Amy Wild arrived at school too soon.
 Miss Ladd would say, "No homework to-day!"
 The lockers opened easily.
 Everybody paid his class dues on time.
 Gum-chewing were permitted in school.
 Charlotte Arne had to keep away from the water for a year.
 Seniors could run by 209!
 All the students brought their excuses on time!
 All pictures had been taken on the appointed date!

Girls' Athletic Association

OFFICERS:

President	CHARLOTTE ARNE
Vice-President	CAROLYN BAILEY
Secretary	HELEN ROBINSON
Treasurer	DOROTHY BIRD

The Girls' Athletic Association meets in the Assembly Hall on the second and fourth Tuesday of every month. The club was organized last year in order to encourage athletics among the girls, giving each one equal chance to participate in sports and to promote the ideals of fair play.

In the Autumn, the girls of the first team acquired their special uniforms of blue and white, the colors of the school.

The two most important events of the year were the combined Varsity "M" and G. A. A. Dance, and the return of the Alumnae team which played the Varsity Basketball. The latter event was followed by an entertainment.

The club has a basketball and a swimming team, both of which have held meets with the schools of surrounding cities. There are also a baseball team, a tennis team, and an interclass soccer team.

HOW HAPPY WE WOULD HAVE BEEN:

If the radiators didn't serenade us when we wanted to hear an assembly.
 If there were no report cards to be signed!
 If we were never summoned to Office 202-A.
 If there were not always a daily struggle between the masculine and the fair sex concerning the amount of fresh air needed.
 If the school clocks were set back ten minutes instead of three.
 If assemblies did not come during study periods.
 If every Senior got an "A."
 If teachers forgot to give Blue Slips.
 If the doors did not swing.
 If the fire alarm would ring during a test!
 If the ropes on the window shades were stronger!
 If the lockers would treat with dignity the full-fledged Seniors!

ADVISERS:

HERBERT L. COLLINS EDWARD M. BROOKS THOMAS W. O'CONNOR
 ARTHUR G. TERRILL RICHARD J. PHELAN M. ARTHUR NOBLE

The object of the Varsity "M" Club is to foster good spirit; to help mould sportsmanship; to be loyal to the school; to attain a high standing in studies; and to increase interest in athletics.

The main event was a banquet in June. In order to raise funds for this banquet, the club held two socials. The basketball game between the varsity and the faculty, won by the varsity, proved to be most successful. The dance in the gymnasium was attended by a large crowd.

The pin, selected by the club, was a gold-plated "M", with a gold chain attached. There is, on the other end of the chain, either a baseball, football, basketball, track shoe, or crossed hockey sticks, which represents the sport in which that member made his letter.

The Cum Laude Club was organized in February under Mr. Woodward's guidance. Its members are boys on the Honor Roll. The club's purpose is to promote a feeling of friendship among those who belong. Meetings have been held at regular intervals during the year, at which students from various colleges have spoken. A banquet is planned in June.

A BOTHERSOME TRIO

There are three girls of High School fame,
 These are the girls with the very same name.
 They're in the same class and home room, too,
 And telling them apart is known to few.

The teachers grumble and the teachers scold,
 They can't tell them apart, not even for gold.
 To the friends of these girls for help they must go
 If each one's correct name they expect to know.

The first of these girls is Esther L.
 The next's middle name with an "H" we spell.
 The third is Esther, no middle name—
 For alas!—She is just Esther—plain.

Two are dark and one is light,
 But I don't know who has the most fight.
 One likes sports; another, books,
 While the third goes in for her good looks.

But next year the teachers will have some rest.
 They will not be bothered by such a pest.
 The three Esther Smiths will soon be gone
 Cheer up, dear teachers, it won't be long.

Debating Club

The Medford High School Debating Club, now in its third year, met each alternate Wednesday afternoon at one-thirty in the lunch-room. After luncheon, the twenty-eight members held a formal meeting. Then there followed an informal discussion on general subjects. Herbert C. Giffen presided; Thomas Sharkey was vice-president; Harold Woodaman combined the duties of secretary-treasurer; and Elmer Kenneally was the sergeant-at-arms. Mr. Rogers, faculty adviser, is a member of the Executive Committee of the Metropolitan Debating League, an organization which Medford joined this year.

A CAPPELLA CHOIR

A Cappella Choir

OFFICERS:

Treasurer ALLISON BRAYTON
 Librarian RUTH FUGLESTAD

The A Cappella Choir, under the direction of Ralph I. Schoonmaker, has taken a very active part in school affairs this year. The club planned several excellent assemblies, and is to be remembered especially for its fine Carol singing in the Christmas program. The girls have also been featured in many concerts and entertainments outside of school. Of special note was their participation in the Patriots' Day celebration and in the entertainment of the Men's Club at the Mystic Congregational Church, May 1. On May 15, during the Centennial celebration, the Glee Club sang at the dedication of a tablet, and at the Pageant on May 17.

The programs without exception, offered during the season, have been a source of benefit and pleasure to the club members and have afforded keen enjoyment to those attending the performances.

WHY DOESN'T SOMEONE GIVE:

"Jimmy" Occhipinti a witty saying?
 John Herlihy a problem he cannot do?
 Amy Wild a smile?
 "Rubinoff" Pantaleo a violin to play?
 Ralph Adleman some homework to do?
 "Frank" Myers something to eat?
 Harry Stabile some classes to cut?
 Mr. Merrill some good new jokes?

The Boys' Glee Club was reorganized in January by Ralph I. Schoonmaker, Supervisor of Music. There were over forty members enrolled in the club and weekly meetings were held in the assembly hall.

At the end of May, the club presented a concert at the Roberts Junior High School, in conjunction with the Girls' A Cappella Choir, the band, and the orchestra. Those who took part deserve congratulations for a fine piece of work.

ORCHESTRA

Orchestra

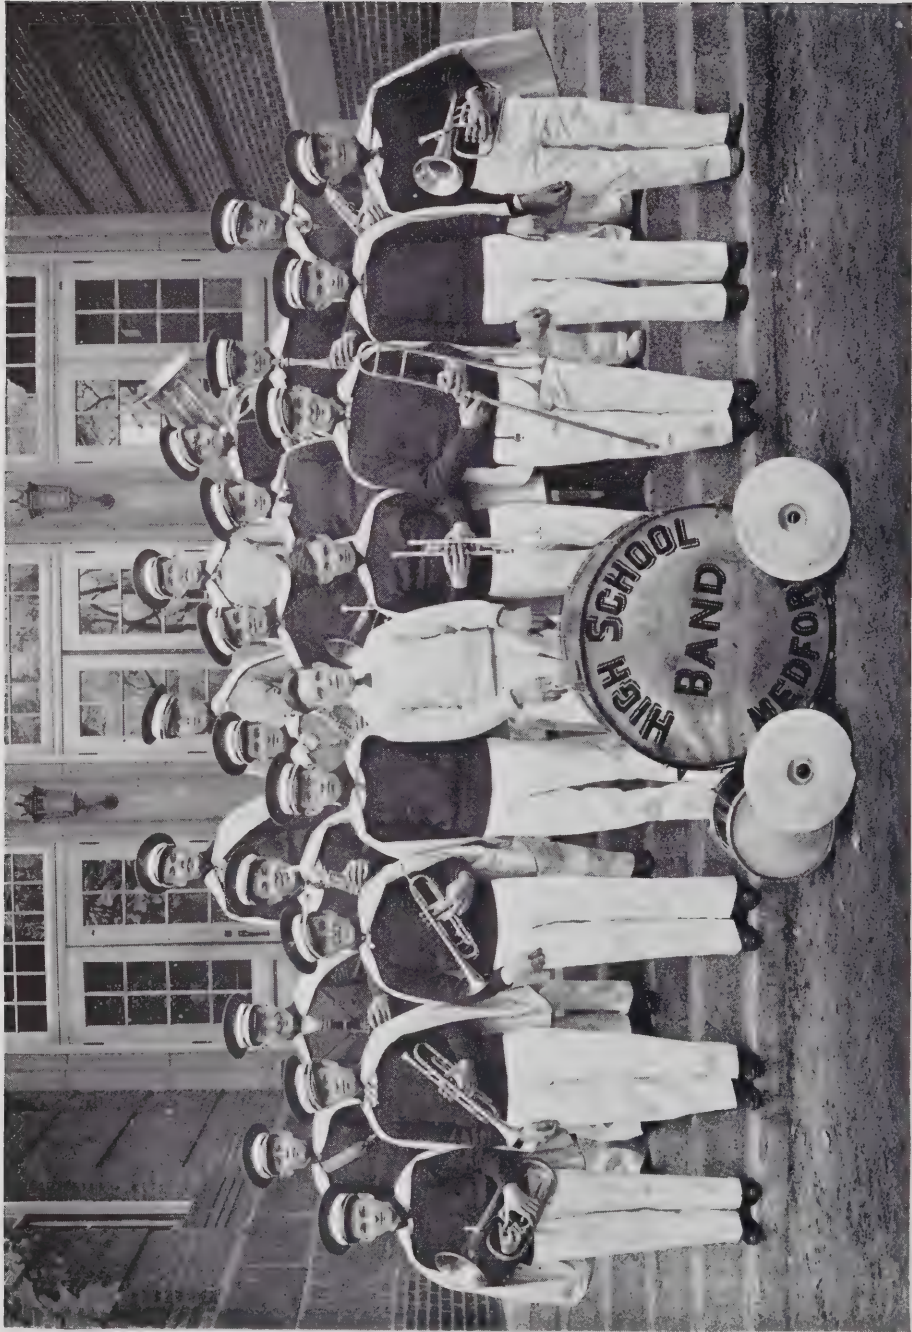

The orchestra has been very active this year and has played at many assemblies and evening functions. Under the capable instruction and direction of Mr. Ralph I. Schoonmaker, it has furnished music for the Senior Play, the Teachers' Club Play, and at the observance of the sinking of the "Maine." A great deal of pleasure was added to the Prize Speaking Contest by the fine program of music which the orchestra presented. The orchestra took part in the Centennial celebration by playing at the Pageant.

Blue and White Band

As soon as he assumed charge here in September, Mr. Schoonmaker, Medford's new Music Supervisor, reorganized the Blue and White Band. Rehearsals began immediately and the director inaugurated night marching for the first time in the history of the school.

Once again Medford High School has a real band. Dressed in their snappy uniforms with the smart blue and white capes, the boys made an attractive picture as they marched in perfect rhythm. During their night practice, Mr. Schoonmaker must have taught them how to form letters, for the band both surprised and thrilled us at the games by making "M's".

Medford's light team met a much heavier foe on a wet field at Brockton and scored in the second period when Hardy recovered a fumble behind the Shoe City goal line.

In the last minute of play in the Somerville game, Hardy intercepted a pass and raced down the sidelines. The crowd, surging on the field, forced him into the arms of a Somerville player.

Everett scored in the first minutes of play and succeeded in the try for the point. Medford retaliated a few minutes later but failed to kick the point. In the third period, Hardy grabbed a long pass and stepped over the goal line. The referee declared a touchdown but the umpire overruled his decision since Hardy stepped out of bounds.

Medford surprised Arlington by scoring twice in the first period. Arlington tallied in the third period but a gallant Blue and White goal line stand prevented another touchdown.

BASEBALL TEAM

The Medford giant killers tumbled Waltham from the undefeated ranks. Waltham's score came in the first period. A long pass to Gurney evened the score. In the third period, Gurney intercepted a forward pass in the end zone. The referee ruled it a safety, giving Waltham two points, but, consulting the rule book, he corrected the error. In the closing minutes of the game, Macdonald, after intercepting a pass, scored on an end sweep.

The Golden Tornado had Medford on the run during the majority of the game, but neither was able to score.

The Blue and White's veteran team won the majority of its games but fell short of reaching the tournament by one loss.

Coach Brooks' boys trained hard and faithfully but luck seemed to favor the opponents, for on many occasions Medford was far superior to its opponents and in the last few minutes lost the games.

Walter Carew, a talented junior, was chosen captain for next season.

Capt. Gurney was outstanding throughout the entire season and displayed his leadership by being high point scorer.

Carl Sarno's work at guard should not be overlooked. Carl, beside being high among the point scorers, also proved to be one of the finest guards in the league.

In glancing down the schedule of the fourth team to represent the Blue and White in the Greater Boston Hockey League, we have seen that the young inexperienced team, despite the handicap of equally inexperienced players, displayed the courage and endurance characteristic of all Medford teams. The team, composed mainly of lower class men, supported by the following seniors, Donald McGinnis, Thornton Cameron, Lawrence Lewis, and Herbert Bergeron, predicts an experienced and talented team for Coach Lang next season.

To the lower class men, we leave the sincere hope that they may inherit the spirit displayed by the seniors.

For two consecutive years, the Medford High School Soccer Team, under the leadership of Capt. "Jimmie" Haslam, has won the championship of the Greater Boston Interscholastic Soccer League. To Coach Lang goes much of the credit for the undefeated season. He and his squad deserve the greatest praise for bringing this honor to Medford High twice in succession.

SUMMARY

Medford opened its Track season with the annual Alumni meet on New Year's Day afternoon. The 300, 600, and 1,000 yard runs provided plenty of thrills with the Alumni featuring in the competition. The 1,000 was won by Ellsworth Forbes of the High School after a nip and tuck fight with Perry Jackson of the Alumni.

Lynn English High went down to defeat to the Medford High Team for the first time in three years. Captain Mather, Lennon, Clark, and Chretien turned in victories for the winners.

Medford High suffered its first defeat of the year at the hands of Lowell High. Slattery, Lennon, and Mather starred for Medford.

Medford High, quickly recovering from its defeat at Lowell, defeated Malden High in a nip-and-tuck meet to win by the same score as it lost to Lowell, 47-30. Again outstanding for Medford were Mather, Slattery, and Lennon.

Medford entered the Northeastern Meet, but was unable to gain much headway against some of the more powerful teams of the state, Captain Mather's three points in the 300-yard run being the only Blue and White score.

BOYS' TENNIS TEAM

Lawrence High was defeated in a thrilling meet at Medford's gym. Excelling for Medford were Mather, Chretien, Clark, Queenan, and Lennon.

Medford went down to defeat at the hands of the powerful Newton team which took point after point to win overwhelmingly.

The Medford High Team did not fair well at Andover, receiving only three points as Captain Wally Mather placed second in the 300-yard run.

Medford High was edged by the Huntington Preparatory School, 39-32. Although Huntington School is a Prep. school, it had difficulty in overcoming Medford. Predominating for the losers were Lennon, Mather, and Queenan.

Medford gained three points in the State Meet.

SUMMARY

The Year Book went to the press before the Outdoor Track schedule was completed, but we are happy to announce that the Medford High team promises to be a powerful one this year.

Two track meets have been completed thus far, Captain Torbert Macdonald and Wallace Mather being outstanding in both meets.

Boys' Tennis

Coach H. CARLETON SEYMOUR
 Captain EDWARD SERUES
 Manager THORNTON FULLER

This year, for the first time in two years, Medford High School has formed an independent boys' tennis team.

The school has been fortunate in having obtained the courts at the West Medford Tennis Club for its practice sessions and regular matches.

In the first two games of the season Medford was victorious, defeating Malden High School in its opening match 4-2 and later overcoming Everett 5-3.

The outstanding player for Medford is Robert Campbell who scored four points in the first two matches. Edward Serues also has helped the team along by scoring three points.

From early October until the latter part of November, the Girls' Soccer team was active. Practice sessions were held at the Webster Street Playground. Interclass games were the principal features of the season, the senior varsity winning two and losing three games. Miss Luce was assisted in coaching the team by Miss Lorraine Driscoll, '34.

GIRLS' SWIMMING TEAM

Girls' Swimming

Coach MYRA I. LUCE
 Captain EDNA DAVIDSON

This year, swimming for girls was such a popular sport that it was necessary to hold two practice classes every Thursday at the Malden "Y". The first groups consisted of girls who were able to swim, but who were not ready for varsity practice. The second group was made up of advanced swimmers competing for a place on the varsity team.

Charlotte Arne, last year's swimming captain, helped the advanced group of swimmers, giving them many points on starts, turns, and competitive swimming as a whole.

This year dual meets were held with Somerville and the Somerville Aquatic Club. A meet was also held with the Malden, Medford, Melrose, Somerville, and Lynn Y. M. C. A.'s. Although the competition was very keen, Medford High School placed third.

Farewell

Our school's first century ends today.
Farewell with sadness we must say ;
Yet, glad the thought comes through our tears :
We have made the most of happy years.
For our school's success we hope and pray
Through the second century, dawning to-day.
